Red Cross Help for War Bride to Be Adequate

WASHINGTON — The American Red Cross announced that it was assigning recreation and social workers to ships bringing war brides to New York and San Francisco.

Red Cross chapters in the port cities will assist wives and children of servicemen and veterans on their arrival and others will help out in towns where they have long stopovers.

In towns to which the wives and children are going, the Red Cross said it would make sure the relatives expected and were prepared to receive them. It said that the war department had asked it to discourage plans for husbands and other relatives to meet incoming ships.

The army had set aside special ships to bring war brides to this country.

Crippled Children Living in Palace

Prince Umberto Provides Home for Stricken.

ROME. — Thirty children — once healthy and normal, but today blind or crippled refugees from Cassino and other Italian towns where the Allies fought the Germans—have found a home in Rome's royal palace.

Boys and girls, 4 to 12 years old, some without legs and arms, others with faces marked with powder burns from mines and bombs, are living in the Quirinal, the palace of Prince Umberto, lieutenant general of the realm.

More than a year ago the prince assigned the children a building facing the principal garden of the Quirinal.

The children are wards of the Italian Chapter of the Sovereign Order of Malta, organized in 1099 to take part in the Crusades. Today the order supports hospitals, child clinics, and other welfare projects in many European countries.

Found by American, British and Brazilian soldiers in the battle area during the fighting for Central Italy, they were given first aid and hospitalization and later brought to Rome.

"The greatest difficulty," said Prince Umberto recently, "was to remove the traces of the grievous shock from which they were suffering."

The prince described how the attentions and care of five Sisters of Charity, members of the blue-garbed order of hospital nuns founded by St. Vincent de Paul, have helped the children.

Because of their frequent visits, the prince and his children are well known to most of the children.

When, during a recent visit, seven-year-old blind Vittorio called him over to show him a toy, the prince explained that Vittorio was in his mother's arms when a German bullet killed her, grazed the child's temple and cut the optic nerve.

Umberto pointed out little Italo, aged 10, who lost not only his sight but also both arms below the elbow.

"While most of the children who have lost their sight are learning to feel things with their hands," the prince said, "Italo is doubly handicapped, but still has the spunk to take a lively interest in everything."

The weather: continued cool today and tomorrow.

The Appomattox Lions Club will meet tonight.

Rich Uranium Deposit Is Discovered in Australia

SYDNEY, AUSTRALIA. — T. Dougherty, general secretary of the Australian Workers union, said recently at an A.W.U. conference that the richest uranium deposits in the world have been found in southeastern Queensland.

Dougherty said the deposits were found near the small town of Stanthorpe.

Uranium is an essential element in atomic energy research.

Dougherty said the Stanthorpe deposits "contain the highest percentage of uranium of any deposit in the world," adding that "samples sent to Britain yielded up to 3 per cent uranium."

In Canada, a deposit containing 018 per cent uranium is being exploited, Dougherty said.

Liner Queen Mary Now Is Floating Nursery

SOUTHAMPTON, ENGLAND. — Britain's Queen Mary was transformed into an 81,000-ton floating nursery for G.I. Joe junior's who are sailing for America with their English war-bride mothers.

Complete with a baby carriage "garage" now a promenade deck and rows of diaper-dried gear in the drained swimming pool, the vessel sailed February 3 with 2,400 brides and babies.

Special baby lifebelts hang from every cot in the first class luxury cabins which the mothers occupy. Eight bunks and two cots now fill the suite once used by Winston Churchill
